Code of Business Conduct and Ethics

1. Introduction

a. This Code of Business Conduct and Ethics (the "Code") applies to all directors, officers, employees and third parties employed or directly engaged by Fidelity & Guaranty Life; Fidelity & Guaranty Life Holdings, Inc.; Fidelity & Guaranty Life Insurance Company; or Fidelity & Guaranty Life Insurance Company of New York; and their direct and indirect subsidiaries (the "Company"). You have an obligation to become familiar with and to comply with the ethics and compliance principles set forth in the Code, as well as all other applicable corporate policies and procedures in all Company matters. Accordingly, you should read the Code carefully to make sure you understand all of the provisions of the Code, the consequences of not complying with the Code, and the importance of the Code to the Company's continuing success.

b. Annual Certification of Compliance - On an annual basis, every employee is required to certify to the Company that he or she has read and agrees to comply and is complying with all of the provisions set forth in the Code.

c. Violations of Policies - Violations of the Code or other policies are subject to disciplinary action, up to and including termination. In some cases, civil and criminal penalties may also apply.

d. Purpose of the Code - The Code provides guidance on how to maintain the Company's commitment to being ethical in all of its business dealings. The Code cannot anticipate every possible situation or cover every topic in detail. The central concept of the Code is to confirm the Company's dedication to the principles of ethical and lawful business conduct, and all of our business decisions should be evaluated in this light. The business endeavors of the Company must be conducted in accordance with the highest ethical and moral standards, avoiding any activity or transaction which would be in violation of the law. It is important for all of us to remember that the Company's success depends in large measure upon public confidence in our integrity and principled business conduct.

For all intents and purposes, this Code shall be deemed a "Code of Ethics" within the meaning of paragraph (b) or Regulation S-K Item 406, applicable to the Company's chief executive officer, chief financial officer, and persons performing similar functions.

2. Customers

The Company is committed to serving our customers fairly and ethically. We expect all employees, producers (the individuals and firms authorized to sell and distribute our insurance products), and our vendors (individuals and firms providing services on behalf of the Company to our customers) to share this commitment.

We commit ourselves, in the sale of our insurance products:

- To conduct business according to high standards of honesty and fairness and to treat our customers as we would expect to be treated;
- To provide competent and customer-focused sales and service;
- To compete fairly;
- To provide advertising and sales material that is clear, honest, and accurate;
- To handle customer complaints and disputes fairly and promptly; and
- To maintain a system of supervision and monitoring reasonably designed to demonstrate our commitment to compliance with these principles.

3. Employee Relations

We value the relationship we have with our employees and base our actions on respect for the dignity of the individual.

We are committed to the following principles when managing our employee relationships:

- We recruit and promote employees on the basis of their suitability for the job without discrimination in terms of race, religion, color, gender, age, marital status, sexual orientation or disability unrelated to the task at hand.
- We seek to provide a healthy and safe work environment. Employees for their part have a duty to take every reasonable precaution to avoid injury to themselves, their co-workers, and the public.
- We recognize the efforts of the individual in helping to create the success of the Company. Compensation policies seek to recognize both the contribution of the individuals and the performance of the sector of business in which they work.
- We encourage and help employees at all levels to develop relevant skills and competencies, through both work-related training and self-development, in order to progress their careers.
- We recognize the need to develop effective processes for communication with employees within and across each department of the Company.

4. Third Parties

Third party organizations and individuals performing work on behalf of the Company are expected to abide by the Code when performing Company work and to report any violations to their supervising principal at the Company, the General Counsel or, as appropriate, directly to the Company's Fraud Hotline (866-748-6471).

5. Conflicts of Interest Policy and Certification

The Company will provide a separate policy regarding conflicts of interest (the "Conflicts of Interest Policy"). Every employee has an obligation to read and comply with all of the provisions set forth in the Conflicts of Interest Policy and to complete, sign and provide to the Company the certification attached to the Conflicts of Interest Policy.

6. Company Opportunities

Employees may not use Company property or information or their position with the Company for personal gain. If you are presented with a business opportunity through the use of Company property or information or because of your position with the Company, and if such opportunity is within the Company's lines of business, then you must first present the business opportunity to the Company before pursuing it in an individual capacity. Each such business opportunity that you wish to pursue must be disclosed to a supervisor, who shall then contact the executive officer to whom he or she reports. If the Company issues a written waiver of its right to pursue the business opportunity and grants you written consent to pursue the business opportunity, you may do so on the same terms and conditions as originally proposed and consistent with the ethical guidelines established by the Code and other Company policies.

7. Integrity

All employees are required to act honestly and deal fairly and ethically in all of the Company's business relationships, whether with its policyholders, customers, suppliers, competitors, or other Company personnel. This requirement goes beyond mere compliance with the law. You should not take unfair advantage of anyone through manipulation, concealment, abuse of privileged information, misrepresentation of material facts, or any other unfair or unethical practice.

a. Compliance - You must comply fully with the Code and all applicable federal, state, and local laws, rules, and regulations that govern the Company's business. Because the laws that are applicable to the Company's business are often very complex, and penalties for violations can be severe, you should discuss any legal questions that you may have with your supervising Company officer, who may refer your question to the Company's legal counsel. If you suspect or become aware of a violation of law by a Company director, officer, or employee, it is your responsibility to report this immediately in accordance with the provisions of Section 1212 of the Code (Enforcement of the Code).

   The Company maintains a number of policies that are designed to assist employees in complying with applicable law in the conduct of the Company's business. These include, for example, applicable policies on sexual harassment, equal employment opportunity, and conflicts of interest, which are described in other written materials available to you.

b. Full, Fair, Accurate, Timely and Understandable Disclosure - U.S. federal and state securities laws impose continuing disclosure requirements on the Company, and require the Company to regularly file certain reports with and make certain submissions (the "Reports") to the Securities and Exchange Commission and the New York Stock exchange and disseminate them to its shareholders. Such Reports must comply with all applicable legal and exchange requirements and may not contain material misstatement or omit material facts.

   All Employees directly or indirectly involved in preparing such Reports, any Employees who regularly communicate with the press, investors and analysts concerning the Company, and all representatives who assist the Company in preparing such Reports and communications, will ensure that such Reports and communications are (i) full, fair, timely, accurate and understandable and (ii) meet all legal requirements. This policy applies to all public disclosure of material information about the Company, including written disclosures, oral statements, visual presentations, press conferences and media calls. This policy also applies to reports and submissions of the Company under the rules of all applicable insurance regulators.

c. Concerns Regarding Accounting and Auditing Matters - The Company has established written procedures for the receipt, retention, and treatment of complaints regarding accounting, internal accounting controls, or auditing matters, and for the confidential, anonymous submission by employees of the Company of concerns regarding questionable accounting or auditing matters. Complaint procedures are available through the Fraud Hotline which is posted on the intranet maintained by the Company for its employees.

8. Bribery, Corruption, Political Contributions and Other Improper Payments

a. Bribery and Other Improper Payments - The Company must maintain high ethical and professional standards in dealings with government officials and members of the private sector. The Company and its employees are prohibited from engaging in bribery for the Company's or an employee's benefit or that of an employee's family, friends or business associates. Accordingly, you must not, on behalf of the Company, directly or indirectly promise, offer or give money, gifts or favors to anyone, including any government official, agent, employee, committee or campaign of any government, political party, labor organization or business entity, or any candidate for political office, with the intent to induce favorable business treatment or to improperly affect business or government decisions. Conversely, you are not permitted to accept gifts or favors that are meant to persuade you to take an action on behalf of the Company that is favorable to the gift-giver. These prohibitions do not restrict your individual, personal right to make lawful contributions of your own funds and on your own time to any organization or political candidate you wish.

b. Corruption - Employees must not become involved in corrupt activities intended to influence the action of any person in relation to the Company's business. In addition, you must comply with the rules applicable to any governmental agency with which you are dealing.

c. Gifts and Hospitality - The anti-bribery provisions of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1977 ("FCPA") prohibit the giving, offering, or authorization of the payment of money, gifts, or "anything of value" for the purpose of corruptly influencing a foreign official. The payment of value may include, among other things, payment for travel or entertainment, gifts, or contributions to charity affiliated with or sponsored by foreign officials or their family members, or associates. The anti-bribery provisions do not apply to employees who give to their own charities or community support projects.

The Company's gifts and hospitality principles extend beyond the anti-bribery provisions of FCPA and influencing foreign officials. For purposes of defining gifts and hospitality on behalf of the Company, a "gift or favor" shall not include a loan from a financial institution on customary terms, an article of nominal value ordinarily given for sales promotion or as a common business courtesy, or occasional and reasonable business meals or entertainment consistent with local, social and industry custom. Employees of the Company must seek approval from their manager for hospitality/gifts accepted or offered above a limit of $100. Any gift over $100 will need to be reported to your manager for approval and a Gift Approval Form will need to be filled out and approved by your manager and sent to Compliance for tracking purposes. The Gift Approval Form can be found as an addendum to the Code.

9. Whistleblowing Policy

The Company's senior management encourages and supports disclosure of suspicious or illegal activity impacting the Company. There is a mechanism in place for employees to disclose their concerns through the Company's Fraud Hotline (866-748-6471). The Company has shared the availability of the Fraud Hotline for purposes of this whistleblowing policy through the display of the Fraud Hotline phone number and instructions in public areas of the Company's worksite. The Company's Fraud Hotline is a resource for employees to report illegal activities that includes an independent, objective and prompt investigation of the alleged activity reported. The Company will not permit retaliation against any employee of the Company for reporting, in good faith, suspected violations of the Code.

"Illegal Activities" are defined as an activity or behavior being committed or about to be committed including, but not limited to, the following:

- Criminal offense;
- Breach of conduct of any legal obligation;
- Endangering health and safety;
- Damage to environment or Company property;
- Unethical Practice in accounting, internal accounting controls, financial reporting and auditing matters;
- Conduct committed contrary to the Code of Business Conduct and Ethics and other core Company values; and
- Cover up of any of these actions.

A "Whistleblower" is an employee who alerts the Company, via the appropriate channels, such as a manager, the human resources department, or the Fraud Hotline, of illegal actions that may endanger the Company's employees, assets or reputation.

To be protected as a whistleblower, an individual must:

- Genuinely believe that the knowledge or suspicions reported by the whistleblower are true and relate to illegal actions impacting the Company. The whistleblower can relate to past, present or future events.
- Clearly communicate from the outset that a confidential whistleblowing report is being made to senior management.

Suspicions or knowledge of illegal activity should be dealt with through the chain of command first unless there are specific reasons why this is not reasonable (for example, the whistleblower believes that up line management might be implicated).

It is only when the normal reporting line has been exhausted, or is impractical and the whistleblower is not satisfied that the manner has been adequately dealt with, that a whistleblower report should be considered. This communication may be:

- Speaking to or e-mailing the person within the Company that has been identified to receive whistleblowing complaints; or by
- Making a report through the Company's Fraud Hotline (866-748-6471).

All reported and suspected financial crimes, involving the Company, are fully investigated by the Financial Crimes Officer. After a full investigation is conducted, a response plan incident is documented which denotes findings and if any follow-up actions are necessary. The incident will be reported to senior management and the Chief Executive Officer as deemed necessary. Where appropriate, the crime will be reported to law enforcement and/or regulatory authorities.

If the whistleblower chooses to remain anonymous, it is important that they communicate their request to remain anonymous and they ensure that enough information is provided in their report to facilitate a thorough investigation.

Failure to follow the procedure of internal options first (for instance by approaching the media before the Company) could lead to disciplinary action. The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act permits an exception to the requirement to follow internal disclosure procedures first with a system for reporting a violation of United States securities laws to the Securities and Exchange Commission. However, this federal regulation encourages employees, with potential monetary reward incentives, to follow internal company procedures prior to reporting any violations to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

While protection is provided to whistleblowers under these procedures, deliberate false or malicious reports will not be tolerated. Anyone found making deliberate or false reports will be subject to disciplinary action which could lead to termination.

Giving or accepting an instruction to cover up serious violations will not be tolerated and will lead to disciplinary action.

All employees of the Company are required to cooperate with investigations. During or after the investigation, any employee that discloses the presence of an investigation or details to the contrary to these principles outside of the investigators may be subject to disciplinary action.

10. Insider Trading

United States federal and state law prohibits the use of "material inside information" when trading in or recommending Company securities. Accordingly, no Employee may engage in transactions in the Company's shares (whether for their own account, for the Company's account or otherwise) while in possession of material inside information ("Insider Trading") relating to the Company. Further, no Employee who is in possession of material inside information may communicate such information to third parties who may use such information in the decision to purchase or sell Company shares ("Tipping"). These restrictions also apply to securities of other companies if an Employee learns of material inside information in the course of his or her duties for the Company. In addition to violating Company policy, Insider Trading and Tipping are illegal.

What constitutes "material inside information" is a complex legal question, but is generally considered to be information not available to the general public, which a reasonable investor contemplating a purchase of Company share would be substantially likely to take into account in making his or her investment decision. Such information includes information relating to a share split and other actions relating to capital structure, major management changes, contemplated acquisitions or divestitures, and information concerning earnings or other financial information. Such information continues to be "inside" information until it is disclosed to the general public.

Any person who is in possession of material inside information is deemed to be an "insider." This would include all Employees (whether management or non-management), as well as spouses, friends or brokers who may have acquired such information directly or indirectly from an insider "tip."

Substantial penalties may be assessed against people who trade while in possession of material inside information and can also be imposed upon companies and so-called controlling persons such as officers and directors, who fail to take appropriate steps to prevent or detect insider trading violations by their employees or subordinates. The Company has adopted written policies on trading insecurities and each director, officer and employee should review the insider trading policy/ies applicable to him or her before trading in securities and consult with the General Counsel if any doubts exist as to what constitutes "material inside information."

The Company is dedicated to its obligation to take reasonable steps to prevent insider trading by any of its employees. The following restrictions apply to all employees of the Company. Failure to abide by these restrictions would not only be a violation of the Code, but may also be a violation of state or federal laws and may subject you to disciplinary action or to civil or criminal liability.

11. Protection of Company Assets

a. Company Assets - Every employee must protect the Company's assets and ensure their efficient and appropriate use. Theft, carelessness and waste have a direct impact on the Company's profitability. All Company assets must be used in accordance with applicable Company policies and procedures.

b. Confidentiality and Privacy Policies - You may have access to extensive files of information regarding policyholders, customers, suppliers, employees, and consultants. Much of this information is confidential, and we have an obligation to keep it that way. In this regard, information about our policyholders is particularly sensitive. They must be able to trust that we will treat such information with care and not disclose it except as may be required or permitted by law. Applicable Company policies govern the use and disclosure of confidential policyholder information and confidential Company financial information.

c. Corporate Information Management - The information systems activity of the Company is to be conducted in a secure environment. Information systems have become an integral part of all business and administrative processes of the Company. As such, the security, reliability, and integrity of the associated data, processes, and systems are of vital importance. Applicable Company policies set forth the guiding principles for ensuring such security, reliability, and integrity.

12. Enforcement of the Code

a. Reporting of Violations of the Code - If you have knowledge or suspicion of a violation of the Code, you must immediately report it in accordance with the following guidelines. You may report anonymously if you choose.

   i. Violations Involving Accounting and Auditing Matters - Any reported violations or suspected violations of the Code involving any accounting, internal accounting controls, or auditing matters relating to the Company should be reported to the Company's Fraud Hotline (866-748-6471).

   ii. Other Violations - The Company encourages you to report other violations directly to your supervisor, a manager, a human resources generalist, or any management representative up to and including the Chief Executive Officer. Situations involving possible violations of the Code or other fraudulent activities, or other events, in which you may wish to remain anonymous, may be reported via the Company's Fraud Hotline (866-748-6471).

   The Company encourages employees to be actively aware of suspicious activity and will not permit retaliation for reports made in good faith.

b. Investigations of Reported Violations of the Code

   i. Violations Involving Accounting and Auditing Matters - Investigations of reported violations of the Code involving accounting, internal accounting controls, or auditing matters shall be conducted in accordance with the internal control procedures.

   ii. Other Violations - Investigations of reported violations of the Code not involving accounting, internal accounting controls, or auditing matters shall be at the direction of the Company's Audit Committee. Any such reported violations involving possible dishonest or fraudulent activities shall be referred to the Fraud Unit and the internal audit staff for investigation. After such investigation, the Fraud Unit or internal audit staff, as appropriate, will make recommendations, if any, to the Company's Chief Executive Officer. The Chairman of the Audit Committee shall be notified of the facts and recommendations associated with any investigation of any Company officer or director for violations of the Code.

   iii. Disciplinary Action for Noncompliance - The Company intends to use every reasonable effort to prevent the occurrence of conduct not in compliance with the Code and to halt any such conduct as soon as reasonably possible after its discovery. Company personnel who violate the Code or other Company policies and procedures may be subject to disciplinary action up to and including termination. In appropriate circumstances, the Company may pursue civil remedies or seek criminal prosecution.

   iv. Certificate of Compliance - You will be required to complete a certification upon first accepting a position with the Company and periodically thereafter acknowledging your understanding of, and compliance with the Code.

   v. Publication of the Code; Annual Statement Disclosure - The Code shall be available at www.fglife.com.

13. No Rights Created

The Code is a statement of fundamental principles and key policies and procedures that govern the conduct of the Company's business. It is not intended to and does not in any way constitute an employment contract or an assurance of continued employment or otherwise create any rights to you.

14. Modifications to the Code

The Code is subject to change and modification at any time upon approval by the Audit Committee. Company directors, officers, employees, and contracted third parties will be notified of any material changes as soon as practicable.
